

Ah, the Mini Cooper. With a flat. In our first 2 hours of Spain

The Mini has no spare; just this useless white goo.

We were stuck here for over five hours waiting for a tow truck.

The policeman Juan Miguel out front was very friendly, though.

A stilt walker during dinner in Barcelona

A bottle of Rioja later...

Placa Reial bustling at night

Looking good at Placa Reial

The Spaniards light everything up at night

The Rioja has set in

The next day at La Sagrada Familia, Gaudi's famous cathedral.

Colorful spires on La Sagrada Familia

Inside a tower of La Sagrada Familia

Looking out to the Mediterranean

Been under construction for over 100 years

You could jump right down the middle!

Smooch!

We went up inside the two right towers

On top of the Guell Palace, home of a Gaudi benefactor.

Keeping the mosquitos at bay on top of the Guell Palace

Waiting for a kiss

Up on the roof

Mmm. Sangria. And awesome paprika covered pizza.

The moon at a Barcelona harbor

Christopher Columbus pointing the way

GIANT planty thingy on the road side

Harvest time! Very slow grape truck. There were lots of these.

Arid land near the central East coast of Murcia, Spain.

Warning! Rampant wind socks!
