First monkeys. Penelope about walked into them on the path.

Sitting next to the hot springs.

Mmm. Bugs.

Park guard and a curious baby.

A whole monkey family doing their thang.

These monkeys have it good.

Monkeys climbing on the cliff. Upside down V3?

Whole lotta monkeys

Monkeys pretty much ignore the humans.

Snatch! Grabbing food thrown by the guard.

Monkey Park's natural fountain in Jigokudani (Hell's Valley).

Delicious dinner at a soba restaurant in Nagano.

Following a procession to the temple in Nagano

Street on the way to the temple.

Street leading to the temple

Day 6. Amazing entrance to the train station in Kanazawa.

Also at the station. Fountain reader board.

Rain in Kanazawa. Penelope was glad she brought her umbrella!

Penelope finds a way to enjoy red bean paste. In soft serve!

A narrow street in the samurai area of Kanazawa. Still pouring!

Huge tripod! Too bright as our camera got wet in the rain.

Kenroku garden in Kanazawa. The tree is propped up. Day 7.

Statue of Prince Yamato Takeru

Raised root pine. The trees are propped further when it snows.

The ground cover.

These guys were all over.

Thatch shelter on Yamazaki-Yama Hill in the gardens.

2nd floor porch in the 1863 villa in Kenroku-en.

Kenroku-en gardeners

No-railing bridge.

Emerald Waterfall

The oldest fountain in Japan. It is gravity fed from a pond.

Ishikawa-mon Gate of the Kanazawa Castle across from the garden

Cool stone wall in Kanazawa. Protection for the temples?

Whee! Wall!

Peace, yo.

Narrow apartment, anyone?

One of many temples in Kanazawa

Shopping on a Kanazawa side street.

Whoa! Trap door in front of the Myoryuji (a.k.a. Ninja) Temple.

Cold drink machine. These were all over, even in alleys.
